Immunologic properties of myelin basic protein. III. The influence of position and number of cysteine and tyrosine residues. The influence of position and number of cysteine and tyrosine residues in the MNP-51 sequence on the antigenicity of myelin basic protein (MBP) was assessed in an autoradiographic immunoassay. The following sequences were radioiodinated: MNP-51, MNP-62, MNP-51-C2-Y2, MNP-51-A2-C2-Y2,

MNP-51-C2-Y2-A2, MNP-50-C2-Y2, MNP-51-C2-A2-Y2, MNP-51-C2-A2-Y2-C2-A2-Y2-C2-Y2-A2-C2-Y2-A2-C2-Y2-C2-Y2-C2-Y2-C2-Y2-C2-Y2, and MNP-50-C2-Y2. After reaction with anti-MBP serum, these sequences are separated into anti-MBP immunoprecipitates, which correspond with the radioiodinated sequences and are separated by sodium dodecyl sulfate-polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis. The concentrations of iodinated sequences corresponding to immunoprecipitated species, determined by densitometry, are plotted against MBP concentration. The slopes of the regression curves, generated from these data, are used to determine the amount of MBP required to saturate an anti-MBP immune response. The kinetics of anti-MBP antibody production are not influenced by the number or position of cysteine residues present in the MNP-51 sequence.Q: Filter data
