GSM SIM is a handy tool with the goal of allowing users to create and manage global and networked GSM accounts through the Internet and easily update them. There are two versions available: one for the US and the other for the UK, yet they do require you to purchase the software license, which comes in the form of monthly bills. Visually, the program is not at all ugly, thanks to its bold graphics and pleasant interface, although some UI elements are a bit cramped. The main window is divided into several fields, with the first one presenting a list of all the GSM accounts available. You will then have to choose the account type you are planning to create, which can be SIM card, Hotmail or both. To get started, select the country or network you wish to work with and choose from the available internet options provided by GSM SIM: dialpad, Google, Yahoo, MSN, AOL, UK web, etc. Furthermore, you can switch between the SIM card and Hotmail accounts, decide which protocol will be used and customize the login screens. Once everything is done, you can click on the 'Create' button to update your accounts. The program is easy to use and fully functional, although the required payment plan can sometimes become a bit overwhelming for users. Still, we should at least mention the fact that it is available for free all the time and that the app is easy to set up. Smart TV By Plex Media Server Software Description: Smart TV By Plex is a web server that allows users to add software to their network, which then will be available to all the other members of the network. The software can be added through a web browser window or added directly to the media server the app connects to. The main window presents several tabs containing a variety of information, including a summary of the available content, like the Plex Media Server, Smart TV By Plex and the available regions. On the left hand side of the window, users can find the list of recent downloads and a button to download them. Right at the bottom of the window is a list of all software available, split into several categories, which can be expanded if there are more items in the list. You can choose to add the software directly in your media server or in the Internet browser. The latter option requires you to enter the server's URL, while the former option does not require any action other than adding the software to the Media Server. Furthermore 09e8f5149f
