Isolated subtalar joint effusion in children. Twenty-five children with isolated subtalar joint effusion were compared with 25 patients with ankle injuries and 8 children with septic arthritis. They were divided into 3 groups. Group 1, which was the control group, consisted of children without soft tissue injuries. Group 2 consisted of patients with ankle sprains. Group 3 included patients with septic arthritis. There were no differences in clinical features, treatment, and outcome between Groups 1 and 2. Septic arthritis occurred in 3 children of Group 3 and all resolved after treatment. Isolated subtalar effusion is an unimportant entity and does not need surgical treatment. // Responsive: Utility classes // ----- // Hide from screenreaders and browsers // Credit: HTML5 Boilerplate .hidden { display: none; visibility: hidden; } // Visibility utilities // // Quickly hide elements by giving them an !important rule without writing any CSS. .visible-phone { display: none !important; } .visible-tablet { display: none !important; } .hidden-phone { } .hidden-tablet { } .hidden-desktop { } .visible-desktop { display: inherit !important; } // Hide everything else .hidden-desktop * { display: none !important; } .visible-desktop * { display: inherit !important; } // Print utilities // // Media query help for the `hidden-print` rule .hidden-print { display: none !important; } @media print { .hidden-print * { display: none !important; } } // Hide the list of links in the navbar .navbar-nav { > li > a { // Hide anything else in `navbar` // that won't display in small screen / print. .hidden-print { display: none; } } } Q: R dataframe column to JSON when using data.table to convert row data to data.frame I use the following line in R
