April 21, 2017 by. Sims 3 Game cracked by GameRuruze.exe keygen and serial code is:O: How many lines appear before the first find() match? I am trying to add two lines of text to the beginning of the file before the first find() match, as shown in the example below: example.txt: //This is a comment test test again test3 test4 test5 test6 test7 test8 test9 test10 All the lines of text apart from the first five contain the same information; they are all part of the same set of data and will always be located in the same location within the file. The lines that begin with test - are all unique, they are not always in the same location within the file. I want to remove all the lines of text that are within the first five blocks of data and insert a small bit of text in their place that indicates that they have been removed. My current code is as follows: with open("example.txt", "r+") as file: for line in file: id = line.split()[0] line = re.sub(r'\btest\d+\b', r'[1]', line) file.write(line) My current output is as follows: //This is a comment test test again test3 test4 test5 test6 test7 test8 test9 test10 I want the first four lines to be removed from the file, and then the final line that begins with test should have the following inserted into it: SUBMITTED ON: 2017-06-01 This is my first submission, so I hope that they find it useful! I have searched for an answer to this, but they all seem to be wanting the removal of everything, not just the first 5 lines of text. Any help with this would be greatly appreciated! A: Basically, you want to remove the first five lines of text, but in a somewhat different order. I assume
