You can modify a group by adding or modifying a layer or path within that group. Layers can be moved, copied, resized, and deleted. Selecting layers allows you to combine the layers within that group. You can also apply effects or modify the colors of the layers. Selecting multiple layers allows you to combine them. Be sure to check the "Lock layers" box to avoid accidentally selecting the wrong layers. The diagram below demonstrates the various methods to group layer. You can move layers around in the Layers panel to get them in the proper location on the canvas. You can also click and drag the layers onto each other. To move a layer you must select all the layers that compose that layer. To move multiple layers simultaneously, select the top layer and drag it down to the lower layer. To copy a layer, select it, then press Ctrl+C. To resize a layer, select it and then press Ctrl+T. To delete a layer, select it and then press Delete. The Layers panel has a resizing handle at the bottom, as shown below. When you add a layer beneath an existing layer, the layer becomes a new group. Q: How to loop through all objects in a list in Visual Basic? I have a list of objects: `ListBox1.Items.Add(New ListItem("A"))` `ListBox1.Items.Add(New ListItem("B"))` `ListBox1.Items.Add(New ListItem("C"))` How can I loop through this list to check if each item has a name? Thanks in advance. A: You could use LINQ: `Dim items = {A, B, C}` `Dim name = String.Join(",", items.Select(Function(x) x.Name))` `Dim allItems = items.Where(Function(x) String.Equals(x.Name, name))` For Each item In allItems `Console.WriteLine(item.Name)` Next This is an LINQ statement that returns an IEnumerable, which you could use as a collection if you need, or you could loop through the items that are added to the listbox, and then filter them further using LINQ.
